WIRE FRAUD ALERTS

NGFCU prides itself in the security it provides for its members. We are seeing an increase of wire fraud and online payment scams. Please review the following alerts to ensure you are aware of these common fraud and scam practices before completing a wire request.

WIRE FRAUD & WIRE TRANSFER SCAMS

- Cryptocurrency scams: Be extremely wary of anyone offering to deal with payments in cryptocurrency. In many cases, there are no safeguards in place when cryptocurrencies are used for payment.
- Avoid wires to anyone who pressures you to pay immediately by wire or if you're approached with an offer to fund a lucrative investment or business opportunity, usually in another country. You are directed to act quickly and keep the deal a secret, especially when sending the wire.
- NGFCU Offers Zelle® as a convenient way to send money. NGFCU will never ask you to send a Zelle payment to yourself, your financial institution (including NGFCU) will not ask for your login details or password. When in doubt, call us immediately to verify.
- Tech support scams happen when someone contacts you claiming to be from a well-known technology company and requests remote access to your computer or offers you a free repair or software download.

To help avoid this scam: Never give control of your computer to anyone who contacts you. If you receive a call about a computer problem, hang up. If you suspect something is wrong with your computer or believe the scammer obtained access to it, bring it to a reputable company for a malware check.

REAL ESTATE WIRE SCAMS

- Real estate wire scams occur when a person who is buying or refinancing a home wires money to a scammer's account based on false wiring instructions received in an email.

To help avoid this scam: Know what to expect before closing on a loan by confirming the process with your lender. If you receive a last-minute change or urgent request to wire money to avoid losing the property, contact your mortgage consultant. Before wiring money, confirm instructions with your mortgage consultant or title company by calling a phone number you trust. Do not call a new number or respond to an email with new instructions.

ROMANCE SCAMS / FAMILY EMERGENCY SCAMS

- Romance scammers create fake profiles on dating sites and apps. They strike up a relationship with you and work to build your trust, sometimes talking or chatting several times a day. Then, they make up a story — like saying they have an emergency — and ask for money. A romance scammer might also contact you through social media sites like Instagram or Facebook.
- You get an unexpected call from someone who pretends to be a friend or relative. They say they need cash for an emergency and beg you to wire money right away. They might say they need your help to get out of jail, pay a hospital bill, or leave a foreign country. They often ask you not to tell anyone in your family. Their goal is to trick you into sending money before you realize it's a scam.

ONLINE SHOPPING SCAMS

- Online shopping scams can be difficult to spot because scammers often create realistic websites and social media ads with great deals, fake assurances, and bogus warranties for their products. Typically, the scammer requests payment through a mobile payment app or wire transfer because they are usually irreversible. If you use a payment app or wire money to the scammer, you'll never receive the product and likely not get your money back.

To help avoid this scam:

- Know that anyone can set up a realistic website and social media ad. Scammers will sometimes purchase ads to direct you to their website, so research the seller or product before you buy.
- Watch out for deals that are too good to be true. A deep discount could be the sign of a scammer trying to lure you in, only to tack on additional fees once you make the first payment.
- Don't pay for online products with a wire transfer or mobile payment app. If you must, use a credit card.
- Don't trust phone numbers provided to you in an email, voicemail, or pop-up ad. If you want to call the company, use the customer service number on their official website. Note: Scammers sometimes purchase ads and create fake customer service websites that will show up on search results.
- If you are asked to wire money from a recent deposit or overpayment, discuss the situation with a representative or trusted friend or family member. Be truthful about the situation, since many scammers direct you to lie about why you're sending the money.
- Review your account activity to spot signs of fraud, such as an online transfer from your own savings, credit card, or home equity line of credit. If you're unsure of the descriptions used for a transaction, call to verify.
